

Representation Shift Due in State Assembly

By RICHARD RICHARDS
State Senator

As a result of population growth, and new movements of population within the State, there will be considerable shift in representation in the Assembly when the State is re-districted on the basis of the 1960 Federal census.

Congressional districts will also be redefined to accommodate the eight additional Congressmen which California stands to gain over its previous delegation of 30.

MOST OF THESE new congressional districts will be created in Southern California, with Sacramento, Santa Clara and Contra Costa Counties probably becoming congressional districts by themselves, rather than being lumped in with adjoining counties as at present.

In the State Assembly, whose total representation remains fixed at 80 members, Los Angeles County's representation will probably be increased by two or three seats over the present 30.

San Diego County, which now has four Assemblymen and one Congressman, is expected to gain another congressional seat and increase its representation in the Assembly.

THE SAME is true of Orange County, which now has one Congressman and two Assemblymen. The present congressional district comprising Orange County also includes an adjoining portion of San Diego County.

In the north, San Francisco will most likely retain its two congressional seats but may lose two of its present six assembly seats, as a result of a population decrease caused by a considerable migration to suburban areas in adjoining counties.

ALAMEDA County may also lose one of its present six assembly seats.

The complex problem of re-districting has been under extensive study by the Assembly Committee on Elections and Reapportionment, which will introduce the re-districting bill in the 1961 Session.

IN ONE of my recent weekly reports dealing with exorbitant charges for automobile insurance under the "assigned risk" plan, I inadvertently blamed the insurance agencies rather than the insurance companies.

The specific sentence in question was to the effect that some drivers, under the "assigned risk" plan, "were victims of unscrupulous insurance agents who were charging as much as 200 per cent over the regular cost of similar programs."

What I should have said, of course, was "insurance companies," since it is the companies and not the agents who set the rates, and I am informed that the California Association of Insurance Agents has a strong position against these unfair surcharges by certain companies.
